In China, 247 million people have left home in search of work, with approximately 61 million children left behind. The move means many parents only see their children once a year, leaving them worried, distracted and guilt-stricken at the workplace. This long-term separation often results in strained relationships, exacerbated further by parents’ inability to communicate with their children effectively.

In the workplace, this situation can translate into high turnover rates and a demotivated, unsatisfied workforce.

Parents at Work: Distance Without Separation Training

CCR CSR’s half-day migrant parent training delivers a range of support mechanisms and tools to help workers overcome the challenges associated with being a migrant parent worker.

A participatory learning approach will be applied to the training, where workers will have an opportunity to engage in role play, group activities, experience sharing, and Q&A sessions. At the end of the training, each participant will receive a booklet that they can keep for future references.

Training objectives:

1. Increase their sense of value as parents and lead happier and healthier lives
2. Understand the rights and needs of children at different stages to better support their children
3. Develop effective remote communication skills with their children to build closer relationships

Lesson Overview

- Lesson 1: Why did you leave your hometown for work? Are you ready?
- Lesson 2: Understanding your child
- Lesson 3: Effective remote communication
- Lesson 4: Identify the signs of distress and protect your child
- Lesson 5: Make the most of your time together with your child
Impact of parenting training

CCR CSR measures the impact of each migrant parent training through pre-training and post-training questionnaires, worker interviews, and final evaluation surveys to assess the effectiveness of the training (ex: increase in knowledge, change in behavior). The following data is the consolidated feedback from 1249 workers who took part in CCR CSR’s “WeSupport” program between 2014-2016.

Feedback on the training

- 96% believed the training could be applied to their relationship with their children
- 93% felt the training met their expectations
- 93% thought the activities and discussions increased their understanding
- 92% found the training content easy to understand

How can you get involved?

1. If you know of a factory with a large migrant parent workforce, nominate them to join the program by contacting info@ccrcsr.com
2. Ask your factories to join CCR CSR’s information-sharing webinars where the program is explained in detail

What does the training include?

The training program includes a half day training, a booklet for workers, supplementary access to our WeChat learning platform for all participants (in China), and a final report detailing the impact of the training, which will include an analysis of the baseline survey and final evaluation.

About CCR CSR’s WeChat Learning Platform

CCR CSR’s free WeChat-based “WeSupport” platform contains clips and quizzes that help migrant parent workers build up knowledge and skills related to parenting. According to CCR CSR’s study*, 62% of parents who used the platform said it helped them communicate with their children more effectively.

"The training taught me a lot - I used to feel uncomfortable when I called my son because I didn’t know what to say and we didn’t have common topics so I hung up the phone quickly. After the training, I started to re-think about our relationship. I call my son more often from every two weeks in the past to every other day now.” - A mother from a factory in Shenzhen
